

There are a lot of questions floating around about just how exactly a person goes about getting a home to rent. From finding the home, to rental applications and everything associated with them, the task can seem daunting, so we've decided to post this series about how to go about getting this your home rental done the best way possible.

The first step is finding the home. While there are printed ads, such as in newspapers, flyers, magazines, and other such media, they tend to be dated and often times have already been rented by the time you see them. This method can work, but tends to induce more headaches than progress.

A better method would be to research yourself on the internet. There are hundreds of free online searches, and while it is useful, it's also daunting. I recommend calling a real estate agent. Make sure they work with rentals, some firms even specialize in them.

A Better Realty .Net sets up a personalized search based entirely on your preferences and needs. Our website also has a search, and if you find a home you'd like to see our agents would be more than happy to show it to you.

Our agents are knowledgeable on the market today, and understand what the other companies want to see. We can explain the process in terms that aren't so confusing or intimidating as they can sometimes be. We do affordable property management ourselves, so we have a wealth of knowledge on this topic!
